

Abstract

Marxism and feminism: 40 years of controversy

Andrea D'Atri

This article addresses the debate between Feminism and Marxism, with an emphasis on radical Feminism, which, since the 1970's, has helped guide the discussions on the emancipation of women. It is from a Trotskyist standpoint, that we will address the contradictions of this current of thought and reaffirm the need for a social revolution as a condition to overcome the exploitation of workers and, in particular, of the female gender.

Keywords: Feminism. Marxism. Capitalism. Revolution.